Selection of Option 2 vocational benefits under RCW 51.32.099 does not preclude a worker from appealing the closing order and proving entitlement to permanent total disability benefits. 16 The claimant, Bill D. Ackley, filed an appeal with the Board of Industrial Insurance Appeals 17 on February 5, 2009, from an order of the Department of Labor and Industries dated January 14, 18 2009. In this order, the Department affirmed the provisions of an order dated August 5, 2008. In 19 the August 5, 2008 order, the Department closed the claim with time-loss compensation benefits as 20 paid through June 17, 2008, and directed the self-insured employer to pay the claimant a 21 permanent partial disability award for Category 4 permanent dorso-lumbar and/or lumbosacral 22 impairments. The Department order is REVERSED AND REMANDED.

DECISION

23 As provided by RCW 51.52.104 and RCW 51.52.106, this matter is before the Board for 24 review and decision. The self-insured employer, the Department, and the claimant all filed timely 25 Petitions for Review of a Proposed Decision and Order issued on May 3, 2010, in which the 26 industrial appeals judge reversed and remanded the order of the Department dated January 14, 27 2009. Contested issues in this appeal included finality of the Option 2 order; temporary total 28 disability; permanent total disability; permanent partial disability; and vocational services. In this 29 order, we address only the issues of temporary total disability, permanent total disability, and 30 vocational services. We have reviewed the remaining contested issues and agree with the 31 determination of the industrial appeals judge.

1 The Board has reviewed the evidentiary rulings in the record of proceedings and finds that 2 no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are affirmed. The industrial appeals judge wrote in 3 his Proposed Decision and Order that Exhibit 51 was admitted, but the exhibit itself indicated the 4 document had been rejected. We deny any motion to admit Exhibit 51. The exhibit is rejected and 5 is not part of the record we considered in this matter.

6 Bill D. Ackley was employed as a laborer with the Kitsap County Road Department on 7 September 28, 2004. On that day, he was driving a small pick-up truck and placing cones behind a 8 striping truck. As he turned left, following the striping truck, his truck was struck by an oncoming 9 car on the right rear fender. He hurt his back and was transported to the hospital. Mr. Ackley 10 received conservative care in the form of medication, physical therapy, and epidural injections.

11 Michael McManus, M.D., treated Mr. Ackley from March 23, 2005, through February 26, 12 2009. The doctor diagnosed a herniation at L5-S1 with left lower extremity neurological defects 13 following a recognized dermatome. The doctor testified that electrodiagnostic studies performed on 14 November 1, 2005, confirmed chronic mild left side radiculopathy. An MRI dated March 11, 2009, 15 showed the size of the disc protrusion at L5-S1 had decreased from an earlier MRI, perhaps due to 16 disc desiccation. Dr. McManus testified the decrease in the disc bulge would not necessarily result 17 in a corresponding improvement in clinical findings or Mr. Ackley's symptoms.

18 Dr. McManus identified the following physical findings: (1) antalgic gait favoring the left hip; 19 (2) inability to walk on the left heel and a drift to the left when walking on toes; (3) inability to 20 maintain independent left side heel or toe raises; (4) squatting limited to 60 percent; (5) decreased 21 low back range of motion; (6) absent ankle and knee jerk reflexes; (7) decreased sensation along 22 the S1 dermatome; (8) decreased left large toe extension accompanied by pain; (9) decreased left 23 ankle plantar flexion strength; and (10) low back pain with supine straight-leg raise at 60 degrees.

24 Dr. McManus diagnosed L5-S1 posterior lateral desiccation on the left with protrusion and 25 left side L5-S1 radiculopathy, all related to the industrial injury. He imposed the following work 26 restrictions; (1) sitting and standing no more than 20 minutes at a time and sitting no more than 4 27 hours a day, standing no more than 5 hours per day; (2) driving for no more than 20 minutes at a 28 time, no more than 2 hours per day; (3) only occasional bending, squatting, kneeling, and reaching 29 below the waist; (4) pushing and pulling up to 20 pounds frequently, 30 pounds occasionally, and 30 40 pounds seldom; (5) lifting and carrying up to 10 pounds frequently, 20 pounds occasionally, and 31 40 pounds seldom; (6) no ladder climbing; and (7) a break to stretch every 20 minutes. The 32 restrictions are due to loss of strength and sensation in Mr. Ackley's left leg.

1 Guy Earle, M.D., examined Mr. Ackley on June 22, 2009. Upon examination, Dr. Earle
2 noted that Mr. Ackley had to change position frequently and limped when he walked. Other 3 physical findings were: (1) his left forefoot dropped when he walked on his heels, and his left heel 4 dropped when he walk on his toes; (2) he had a loss of lumbar lordosis; (3) his lumbar range of 5 motion was reduced in all planes; (4) the muscles in his hips and hamstrings were tight; (5) he had 6 significant weakness in his left great toe; and (6) he had diminished sensation to touch along the 7 lateral aspect of the left foot. An MRI showed a tear in the disc at L5-S1, although an MRI dated 8 March 11, 2009, showed less protrusion of the material and a November 11, 2009 MRI indicated 9 the herniated disc had resolved. Dr. Earle diagnosed a low back strain with disc herniation, nerve 10 damage, and radiculopathy on the left. He also felt Mr. Ackley was suffering from mechanical back 11 pain. All of the conditions were related to the September 28, 2004 industrial injury. Dr. Earle 12 agreed with the limitations imposed by Dr. McManus.

13 The only other medical professionals to testify were Russell Vandenberg, M.D., a psychiatrist, 14 and Aleksandra Zietak, M.D. The parties presented no evidence Mr. Ackley's ability to work is 15 affected by any mental health issue. There is no need to summarize Dr. Vandenberg's testimony.
16 Dr. Zietak examined Mr. Ackley on December 2, 2009. Dr. Zietak testified that the only findings 17 were pain and tenderness, and that Mr. Ackley demonstrated pain behavior with en bloc rotation.
18 Dr. Zietak observed Mr. Ackley walking normally at the beginning of the examination, but when he 19 left the examination, he walked with an incomplete toe pickup in his left foot and an exaggerated 20 left-sided limp. Dr. Zietak diagnosed only a lumbar strain related to the industrial injury, which she 21 felt had resolved. She found no need for further treatment, no permanent partial disability, and no 22 reason to impose any restrictions on Mr. Ackley's work activities.

23 We find the testimony of the attending physician, and Dr. Earle, to be more persuasive than 24 that of Dr. Zietak. In so doing, we accept the limitations imposed by Dr. McManus and apply those 25 limitations in determining the benefits to be awarded to Mr. Ackley.

26 Mr. Ackley's case was referred to Judith Parker, VRC, for vocational services in 2005. The 27 educational and vocational history compiled by Ms. Parker demonstrated: Mr. Ackley graduated 28 from high school in the late 1960s and attended college for a period of time; he served in the Air 29 Force for 6 years; and following his discharge from the Air Force, he worked primarily operating 30 heavy equipment including running his own backhoe business for 5-6 years. In determining what 31 physical capabilities Mr. Ackley had for work, Ms. Parker relied on the sitting and lifting restrictions 32 imposed by Dr. McManus. Also, because Mr. Ackley had not been released to return to work as a 1 laborer, she began looking for alternative jobs. Ms. Parker looked at several job possibilities 2 including building inspector; security guard; counter/rental clerk; customer service representative;

3 travel agent; teacher's aide; title researcher; and photo assistant. Based on the information 4 available to her, Ms. Parker concluded Mr. Ackley was not employable unless he was successfully 5 retrained.

6 Mr. Ackley had expressed an interest in attending the Robert Allen program to begin a 7 career in real estate investment. Ms. Parker investigated this possibility, but determined that the 8 program was not an appropriate retraining program because it was too expensive and the program
9 was not Department-approved or offered by a Department-approved provider. She also concluded 10 the job associated with the Robert Allen program would constitute self-employment. Based on 11 these factors, Ms. Parker felt it unlikely the Department would approve such a program. After 12 reviewing career-interest testing results for Mr. Ackley, Ms. Parker began the process for 13 developing a plan to train Mr. Ackley to be graphic designer.

14 As 2007 was ending, Ms. Parker became aware of the pending change in laws pertaining to 15 vocational rehabilitation, including Option 2 benefits. This is the first opportunity we have had to 16 review an appeal involving Option 2 vocational benefits. Option 2 vocational benefits are part of a 17 pilot program instituted by the Legislature under RCW 51.32.099. The statute explains the purpose 18 of the program:

19 (1)(a) The legislature intends to create improved vocational outcomes for Washington 20 state injured workers and employers through legislative and regulatory change under 21 a pilot program for the period of January 1, 2008, through June 30, 2013. This pilot 22 vocational system is intended to allow opportunities for eligible workers to participate 23 in meaningful retraining in high-demand occupations, improve successful return to 24 work and achieve positive outcomes for workers, reduce the incidence of repeat vocational services, increase accountability and responsibility, and improve cost predictability.

25 The program provides an opportunity for injured workers to opt out of the vocational plan approved 26 by the Department.

27 (b) Option 2: The worker declines further vocational services under the claim and 28 receives an amount equal to six months of temporary total disability compensation 29 under RCW 51.32.090. The award is payable in biweekly payments in accordance 30 with the schedule of temporary total disability payments, until such award is paid in 31 full. These payments shall not include interest on the unpaid balance. However, upon 32 application by the worker, and at the discretion of the department, the compensation may be converted to a lump sum payment. The vocational costs defined in subsection (3)(d) of this section shall remain available to the worker, upon application to the department or self-insurer, for a period of five years. The vocational costs shall, if expended, be available for programs or courses at any accredited or licensed

1 institution or program from a list of those approved by the department for tuition, 2 books, fees, supplies, equipment, and tools, without department or self-insurer 3 oversight. The department shall issue an order as provided in RCW 51.52.050 4 confirming the option 2 election, setting a payment schedule, and terminating 5 temporary total disability benefits. The department shall thereafter close the claim.

6 RCW 51.32.099(4)(b). If the worker opts out of the vocational plan by selecting Option 2, the 7 worker receives six months worth of time-loss compensation benefits, paid every two weeks in most 8 cases. The worker also is eligible for an amount certain to be used for retraining by Department-9 approved providers. Once the worker elects Option 2, the Department is to issue an order 10 confirming the Option 2 election, and close the claim.

11 Ms. Parker explained the changes and the Option 2 benefits to Mr. Ackley. On April 3, 2008, 12 the Department approved a training plan in graphic design for Mr. Ackley. The plan called for Mr.
13 Ackley to attend Pierce College, which is approximately 39 miles from his home. Mr. Ackley 14 elected Option 2 benefits on April 14, 2008. Ms. Parker was present when he signed the form. At 15 the time, Mr. Ackley said he wanted to pursue his interest in real estate investment.

16 Mr. Ackley recalled working with a vocational counselor. He testified that when he signed 17 the Option 2 agreement in 2008, he did not understand his claim would be closed and his benefits 18 terminated. Mr. Ackley took two computer courses in 2009, but found attending class difficult 19 because of the time spent sitting. He testified he would still like to pursue a career in photography 20 and computers, but feels it would be too painful to sit in class.

21 The claimant presented the testimony of John Berg, VRC. Mr. Berg did not find it realistic to 22 think that any retraining program would make Mr. Ackley employable. Mr. Berg felt that a job in 23 graphic design would require more education and experience than Mr. Ackley could obtain with his 24 worker's compensation benefits. The plan also required Mr. Ackley to maintain a 2.0 grade point 25 average. In his prior college experience, Mr. Ackley was only able to achieve a 1.5. Mr. Berg was 26 concerned Mr. Ackley did not have the academic ability to complete the training. In addition, 27 Mr. Ackley believed that all of the jobs identified in the labor market survey were in Tacoma or 28 Seattle. Mr. Ackley lives in Kitsap County. His commute to those jobs would require him to sit 29 longer than the limitations imposed by Dr. McManus. Finally, Mr. Berg voiced his opinion that 30 re-employment was not a realistic possibility given Mr. Ackley's age. By the time he completed the 31 training plan, Mr. Ackley would have been over 60 years old.

32 We note that Ms. Parker did not explain how Mr. Ackley could be expected to commute 40 miles to school given his severe limitations in driving and sitting, even though she stated she based her recommendations on those limitations. She also did not explain how Mr. Ackley would

1 be able to commute to Tacoma or Seattle when he was limited to sitting and/or driving only 20
2 minutes at a time. Ms. Parker's failure to explain how the training plan could be accomplished 3 given Mr. Ackley's limitations is one of the reasons we find Mr. Berg's testimony to be more 4 persuasive.

5 For reasons explained below, we are convinced Mr. Ackley is permanently totally disabled 6 and entitled to benefits consistent with that status. We are doubtful that it was the Legislature's 7 intention to have workers elect Option 2 and then be placed on a pension for permanent total 8 disability. There is nothing in the statute, however, that directs the Department to treat an Option 2 9 election as a compromise and release, or as a specific waiver of any other benefits. Furthermore, 10 there is nothing in the statute that indicates a worker is not eligible for pension benefits after 11 selecting Option 2. If the statute were to operate in that fashion, we believe the statute should 12 explicitly state that the Option 2 selection is an irrevocable decision that precludes an award for 13 permanent total disability. The statute should specifically state that a worker cannot appeal the 14 order closing the claim and assert entitlement to benefits as a totally and permanently disabled 15 worker. In addition, if the statute were intended to operate as a form of compromise and release, 16 the paperwork provided by the Department should have completely and clearly informed the worker 17 of the consequences, as well as the benefits, of selecting Option 2.

18 With regard to the issue of the Option 2 order having become final and binding, we do not 19 think the finality of that order prohibits the action we take here. In our view, the finality of that order 20 simply prevents Mr. Ackley from reverting to the vocational plan established by the Department for 21 retraining as a graphic designer.

22 We also recognize that one of the purposes of the statute was to improve vocational 23 outcomes. The Department identified statements from the legislative hearings related to the 24 enactment of this statute that suggest another goal was to reduce the number of pensions. We do 25 not believe, however, that a general goal of improving vocational outcomes, or even a more specific 26 goal of reducing pensions should be construed to operate against awarding a pension to any 27 particular individual. We do not understand the purpose statement to mean that any worker who 28 chooses Option 2 necessarily should be precluded from receiving benefits for permanent total 29 disability. We can envision other circumstances in which a worker who selected Option 2 might be 30 eligible for pension benefits. For example, a worker who selected Option 2, but then reopened the 31 claim for aggravation, might receive a pension at the point of claim closure.

1 Although we understand the arguments put forth by the Department and the self-insured 2 employer supporting the denial of pension benefits, we find the statute to be ambiguous in this 3 respect. We note that any ambiguity in the statute must be liberally construed in favor of providing 4 benefits to the injured worker. RCW 51.12.010.

5 We also believe that this is an unusual case. In most circumstances, a worker would not 6 receive pension benefits after selecting Option 2. The result in this case really depends on the 7 facts before us. Based on the evidence in this case, we are not convinced that the Department had 8 established a viable retraining plan for Mr. Ackley. There were not enough training benefits 9 available for Mr. Ackley to complete all of the coursework required to become employable in the 10 field. The plan required Mr. Ackley to attend college at Pierce College, 40 miles from his home.
11 Mr. Ackley was not able to drive or sit for more than 20 minutes, but his commute to school would 12 take longer than that. Mr. Ackley would have been required to maintain a 2.0 grade point average.
13 His prior experience with college, in which he earned a 1.5 grade point average, caused him some 14 concern about being able to meet the Department's expectations. In addition, the labor market 15 survey for the position for which Mr. Ackley would be trained located positions in Tacoma and 16 Seattle, but not within 20 minutes driving distance of Mr. Ackley's home. Given Mr. Ackley's severe 17 sitting and driving restrictions, it was not reasonable to expect him to be able to work in Tacoma or 18 Seattle.

19 Under the statute, after a training plan had been approved by the Department, Mr. Ackley 20 had to either accept the Department's plan, in which he had no confidence, or select Option 2.
21 Mr. Ackley did not have the benefit of legal counsel when faced with the choice. He likely did not 22 realize that he perhaps needed to question the validity of the training plan approved by the 23 Department. He testified he was not aware that selecting Option 2 would operate to close his claim 24 and terminate his medical benefits. It appears Mr. Ackley did not make a fully informed choice for 25 Option 2 benefits.

26 Even if Mr. Ackley fully understood the consequences of selecting Option 2, Mr. Ackley's 27 physical condition is a barrier to both retraining and becoming employable. His limitations are such 28 that we are convinced he cannot work on a reasonably continuous basis in gainful employment. He 29 is able to sit and stand only 20 minutes at a time, which would impact his ability to work, and his 30 ability to get to work unless he were able to find employment very close to his residence. Based on 31 those limitations, we are convinced Mr. Ackley is permanently totally disabled and our industrial 32 appeals judge's decision directing the Department to award him pension benefits is correct.

1 The parties advanced several arguments in their respective Petitions for Review in this case.
2 We have considered those arguments carefully, but do not find it necessary to address each 3 argument in this decision. We believe it is sufficient to say that had the Legislature intended the 4 Option 2 election to operate as a compromise and release precluding the award of pension 5 benefits, the statute would have said so explicitly. We simply cannot construe the statute to 6 abrogate a right to appeal an order closing the claim or limit the issues in such an appeal absent 7 specific direction by the Legislature to do so. We reverse and remand with direction to the 8 Department to find Mr. Ackley permanently totally disabled and place him on the pension rolls.
9 With regard to any payments made to Mr. Ackley or to any educational institution pursuant to 10 Mr. Ackley's Option 2 selection, we leave the matter with the Department to determine the 11 appropriate disposition of those benefits.

12 FINDINGS OF FACT

- 13 1. The claimant, Bill D. Ackley, was injured on September 28, 2004, while 14 working for the self-insured employer, Kitsap County. The Application for 15 Benefits in Claim No. W-515857 was filed with the Department on 16 September 30, 2004, and on November 2, 2004, the Department entered an order in which it allowed the claim.

17 On April 24, 2008, the Department entered an order in which it ended 18 time-loss compensation benefits effective April 24, 2008, and determined 19 that the claimant had elected not to participate in an approved vocational 20 training plan. On August 5, 2008, the Department entered an order in 21 which it closed the claim with Category 4 permanent dorso-lumbar and/or 22 lumbosacral impairments, and with time-loss compensation benefits as 23 paid through June 17, 2008. The claimant filed a Protest and Request for 24 Reconsideration with the Department on October 1, 2008, directed to the 25 August 5, 2008 order, and on January 14, 2009, the Department entered an order in which it affirmed the provisions of the August 5, 2008 order.
26 The claimant filed an appeal with this Board on February 5, 2009, to the 27 order dated January 14, 2009. The appeal was assigned Docket 28 No. 09 11392, and was granted by an order of the Board dated March 16, 29 2009. These proceedings followed.

- 30 2. The claimant, Bill D. Ackley, was injured on September 28, 2004, while in 31 the course of his employment with the self-insured employer Kitsap 32 County, when a county truck he was driving was struck by another vehicle on the right rear fender. The truck lacked doors, and the collision threw Mr. Ackley toward the open door; he was restrained from being thrown out of the truck by his seatbelt. The accident caused severe back pain. Mr.
Ackley was transported to the hospital, and he was subsequently released and was cared for by his personal physician. As a result of the September 28, 2004 industrial injury, Mr. Ackley sustained posterior lateral disc

1 desiccation on the left side at L5-S1, chronic left side L5-S1 radiculopathy, 2 and nerve damage.

- 3 3. As of January 14, 2009, Mr. Ackley's low back conditions, proximately 4 caused by the September 28, 2004 industrial injury, had reached 5 maximum medical improvement, and were not in need of further 6 treatment.
- 7 4. As of January 14, 2009, Mr. Ackley was a 58-year-old man. He had 8 graduated from high school and attended, but not graduated from, college.
9 He served for six years in the United States Air Force, and after leaving 10 military service worked exclusively in heavy labor, working in construction, 11 landscaping, truck driving, and heavy equipment operation. From April 25, 12 2008, through January 14, 2009, and as of January 14, 2009, due to the 13 residuals of the September 28, 2004 industrial injury, 14 Mr. Ackley was limited to sitting and standing for 20 minutes per hour, with 15 total sitting of four hours per day and total standing of five hours per day; 16 driving for 20 minutes at a time, for a total of two hours per day; bending, 17 squatting, kneeling, reaching below the waist only occasionally; pushing 18 and pulling up to 40 pounds seldom, up to 30 pounds occasionally, and up 19 to 20 pounds frequently; lifting and carrying up to 40 pounds seldom, up to 20 20 pounds occasionally, and up to 10 pounds frequently; no ladder 21 climbing; and he needed a one-minute stretch break every 20 minutes. As 22 of January 14, 2009, Mr. Ackley had no transferable skills that would allow 23 him to perform jobs within his limitations.
- 24 5. Between April 25, 2008, and January 13, 2009, inclusive, and considering 25 the disabilities and physical limitations proximately caused by the 26 industrial injury of September 28, 2004, Mr. Ackley was unable to perform 27 reasonably continuous work at a gainful occupation, in light of his age, 28 education, work experience, disabilities.
- 29 6. As of January 14, 2009, when considering the disabilities and physical 30 limitations proximately caused by the industrial injury of September 28, 31 2004, Mr. Ackley was unable to perform reasonably continuous work at a 32 gainful occupation, in light of his age, education, work experience and work history.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. The Board of Industrial Insurance Appeals has jurisdiction over the parties to and the subject matter of this appeal.
2. Between April 28, 2005, and January 14, 2009, the claimant, Bill D. Ackley, was a temporarily totally disabled worker within the meaning of the Industrial Insurance Act and RCW 51.32.090.
4. As of January 14, 2009, and pursuant to RCW 51.36.010, Mr. Ackley's posterior lateral disc desiccation on the left side at L5-S1, and chronic left side L5 and S1 radiculopathy had reached maximum medical improvement, and he is not entitled to further proper and necessary medical treatment for those conditions.

- 1 5. As of January 14, 2009, Mr. Ackley was a permanently totally disabled 2 worker within the meaning of the Industrial Insurance Act, and 3 RCW 51.08.160.
4 6. The order of the Department of Labor and Industries dated January 14, 5 2009, in which it closed the claim with a permanent partial disability award 6 for Category 4 of WAC 296-20-280 for permanent dorso-lumbar and/or 7 lumbosacral impairments, and with time-loss compensation benefits as 8 paid through June 17, 2008, is incorrect and is reversed. This claim is 9 remanded to the Department to: (1) pay Mr. Ackley time-loss 10 compensation benefits from April 25, 2008 through January 13, 2009; 11 (2) find Mr. Ackley a permanently totally disabled worker effective 12 January 14, 2009; and (3) take such other and further action as is proper 13 and necessary under the facts and the law.

14 DATED: August 19, 2010.

20 DISSENT

21 I respectfully dissent. The stated purpose of RCW 51.32.099 is to increase employability 22 while decreasing pension rates. To that end, the legislature instituted this pilot program whereby an 23 injured worker can elect Option 2 benefits to pursue training in a field of interest to the worker. The 24 premise behind the pilot program is that if the worker has more input into selecting the training 25 program, and has a broader range of options available, the worker will succeed with retraining and 26 become employable. In exchange for that freedom of choice, and the opportunity to receive 27 training without Department oversight, the worker waives any of the other benefits available to other 28 workers who elect to pursue vocational training under the Department plan. The statute operates 29 as a form of compromise and release.

30 In this case, Mr. Ackley was presented with a training program designed to prepare him for 31 employment as a graphics designer. He decided to accept Option 2 to pursue a career in real 32 estate investment. He now seeks to be relieved from the consequences of what transpired to be a

1 poor choice when viewed with the benefit of hindsight. The statute should not operate to relieve 2 workers from poor choices, when those choices were made voluntarily and with full explanation.
3 Ms. Parker clearly explained the program to Mr. Ackley. He knew that he was rejecting the training 4 plan in favor of a career path of his own choosing. Unfortunately, his career path was not realistic 5 when he chose it and has become more unrealistic in light of the current economic downturn.
6 Nevertheless, it was Mr. Ackley's informed choice and he should be bound by it.

7 The Department order in which it closed the claim with permanent partial disability benefits 8 should be affirmed. The Department acted in accordance with the statute, which mandates closing 9 the claim upon a worker's decision to elect Option 2. There simply is no provision in the statute for 10 the selection to be voided and other benefits provided.
