TIMELINESS OF CLAIM \(RCW 51.28.050; RCW 51.28.055\)

Child's claim for survivors' benefits

Minority does not toll the time within which a child's application for survivor's benefits under the Industrial Insurance Act must be filed. A claim filed more than a year beyond the day the rights of the beneficiaries accrued is not valid or enforceable and the Board is without authority to excuse, on equitable grounds, an untimely application for benefits.

...In re Isaias Chavez, Dec'd, BIIA Dec., 85 2867 (1987) [dissent] [Editor's Note: The Board's decision was appealed to superior court under Franklin County Cause No.87-2-50284-1.]

1 this injury on September 27, 1980. Because the applications for benefits were first filed with the 2 Department in July 1985 they were denied by the Department as untimely.

4 In their Petition for Review the petitioners maintain that since the worker's death was the result 5 of a disease process the time limitations for filing a claim for occupational disease, RCW 51.28.055, 6 should apply. Furthermore, it is their contention that the time for filing an application for benefits 7 should be tolled in their case for a variety of reasons. Such reasons include the employer's failure to 8 post notices advising workers of workers' compensation coverage; the employer's failure to report the 9 injury and death to the Department of Labor and Industries; the Department's failure to enforce the 10 posting and reporting requirements; the worker's and the petitioners' ignorance of their rights under the 11 Industrial Insurance Act, their inability to communicate in the English language, and their residence in 12 Mexico during the time allowed for filing the claim; and, the minority of the deceased's children, 13 Veronica and Nora Chavez. Petitioners also contend that RCW 51.28.050 as applied to them 14 constitutes a denial of equal protection and due process as well as an infringement upon their 15 fundamental right to travel.

22 Petitioners are the "wife" and children of Isaias Chavez. Reynalda Arceo and Isaias Chavez 23 held themselves out as husband and wife but never went through a formal marriage ceremony. It is 24 Ms. Arceo's contention that she is the common law wife of the deceased. As the Department's brief 25 indicates, it would not appear that Arceo and Chavez ever established a common law marriage under 26 the law of any state, which could in turn be recognized as a valid marriage under Washington law.
27 Nevertheless, the issue of whether Reynalda Arceo was the "wife" of Isaias Chavez, and therefore a 28 beneficiary as defined in RCW 51.08.020, is not presently before us. We must assume, for our 29 purposes, that she was a spouse of the deceased. There does not appear to be any dispute that Nora 30 and Veronica are the natural children of Isaias Chavez and Reynalda Arceo. Nora Chavez was born 31 June 2, 1978 in Pasco, Washington while Veronica Chavez was born August 27, 1980 in Mexico.

37 In October 1979 Isaias Chavez was employed as an agricultural laborer for Desert Canyon 38 Ranch, which was owned and operated by Alan Fielding. On some date during that month it appears 39 that the deceased's left calf was pinched between a tractor and a disk. Isaias Chavez did not seek 40 medical attention at the time nor did he complain about his injury to his employer. He did, however, 41 have a noticeable limp. He was able to complete the harvest before returning to his home in Mexico.
42
44

45 In Mexico Chavez was initially treated with home remedies. He attempted to work to support 46 his family, but his condition deteriorated and eventually, his leg was amputated. He died on 47

1 September 27, 1980. The exact cause of death is not clear from the record. The Petition for Review 2 and petitioners' brief indicate that death was the result of a gangrene infection, while the certificate of 3 death indicates that death was the result of a tumoration in the left leg with probable metastasis. We 4 would only note that the cause of death and the relationship of death to the injury of October 1979 are 5 issues which are also not presently before us. For our purposes we will therefore assume that the 6 medical evidence would establish the requisite causal relationship between Isaias Chavez's alleged 7 injury and subsequent death.
8
9

10 11 Upon his return to Mexico in 1979, Isaias Chavez advised Reynalda Arceo of the injury which 12 had occurred at Desert Canyon Ranch. When it finally became necessary for Chavez to seek medical 13 attention Reynalda Arceo, on August 24, 1980, wrote to Alan Fielding attempting to describe the injury 14 and requesting financial help to pay for Chavez's medical expenses. Fielding sent Arceo $200.00 15 which Arceo later acknowledged receiving. He did not provide Arceo or Chavez with any industrial 16 insurance claim forms and, although he learned of Chavez's death within a year of the death, he made 17 no attempt to advise Arceo or the Chavez children of any rights they may have had under the 18 Industrial Insurance Act. He considered the incident of October, 1979 to be fairly minor and did not 19 believe it could have resulted in Chavez's death. Fielding, who spoke Spanish, believed that he had 20 received Spanish language notices from the Department which were to be posted advising workers of 21 their rights under the Industrial Insurance Act. He admitted, however, that he had not posted such 22 notices at the job site.

30 Neither Isaias Chavez nor Reynalda Arceo could read or write English. Arceo testified that 31 neither she nor Chavez were aware of their rights under the Industrial Insurance Act or the procedures 32 for filing claims. She did testify that in 1982 a "lady from Texas" told her that she could do something 33 so that her children could get help. She then consulted a lawyer in Pasco who advised her that she 34 would "need a lot of proof and documentation" but did not advise her that it was too late to file a claim 35 for workers' compensation benefits.
36
37
38

39 The timely filing of an application for benefits is a statutorily imposed jurisdictional limitation 40 upon the right to receive compensation and upon the Department's authority to accept the claim for 41 benefits. Wheaton v. Department of Labor and Industries, 40 Wn.2d 56, 240 P.2d 567 (1952). RCW 42 51.28.050 is a statute of non-claim. It does more than prescribe the time within which the right to 43 benefits must be asserted. It imposes a limitation on the right to receive benefits. See Lane v.

2
3 District v. Brazier Construction, 103 Wn.2d 111, 691 P.2d 178 (1984).

4 It is clear that the employer had sufficient notice of the injury to be required to report the injury 5 to the Department. Se RCW51.28.025. The failure of the employer to make such a report, however, 6 does not relieve the worker or his beneficiaries of the obligation to timely file a claim. Pate v. General
7 Electric Company, 43 Wn.2d 185, 260 P.2d 901 (1953) adhered to on rehearing, 44 Wn.2d 919, 269
8 P.2d 589 (1954); Wilbur v. Department of Labor and Industries, 38 Wn. App. 553, 686 P.2d 509 9 (1984).

10 The issue of whether an employer's failure to post the notices as required by RCW 11 51.14.100(1) will relieve a worker or his beneficiaries from the timely filing requirements of RCW 12 51.28.050, has never been decided by a Washington appellate court. Inasmuch as the failure of an 13 employer to report an accident to the Department does not relieve the worker or his beneficiaries of 14 the obligation to file a timely application for benefits, it would seem that an employer's failure to comply 15 with the posting requirement, or the Department's failure to enforce that requirement, would also fail to 16 remedy an untimely filing. We note that the petitioners have failed to cite either Wilbur or Pate or 17 distinguish those cases in any way from the instant case. We therefore see no reason to find that the 18 failure of either the employer or the Department to comply with any statutory duty should relieve the 19 petitioners of the primary obligation to file applications for benefits.

20 The petitioners contend that since Isaias Chavez died of a disease the time limitations for filing 21 a claim for occupational disease, RCW 51.28.055, should apply in lieu of the time limitations for filing a 22 claim for injury. This contention is without merit. The worker's condition and death are alleged to be 23 the result of a sudden and traumatic incident. The fact that this traumatic incident led to a disease 24 process does not convert the condition into an occupational disease, a claim for which is subject to the 25 time limitations of RCW 51.28.055 rather than the limitations contained under RCW 51.28.050.

26 With respect to the constitutional issues raised by the petitioners we would note that this Board 27 cannot rule on the constitutionality of RCW 51.28.050. Bare v. Gorton, 84 Wn.2d 380, 383, 526 P.2d 28 379 (1974). Furthermore, we find nothing in RCW 51.28.050 which denies the worker or his 29 beneficiaries equal protection of the laws or due process of law. Likewise, there is nothing in the 30 requirement that a claim be filed within one year of the date of injury, or within one year of the date the 31 rights of the beneficiaries accrued, which would constitute an infringement upon the right to travel as 32 articulated in Macias v. Department of Labor and Industries, 100 Wn.2d 263, 668 P.2d 1278 (1983).

1 The right to file a claim for benefits is not conditioned upon a worker or his beneficiaries residing in the 2 State of Washington or any particular area thereof for any particular length of time.
3

4 The petitioners also raise an argument that the employer's failure to comply with the reporting 5 requirements of RCW 51.28.025 or the posting requirements of RCW 51.14.100(1), and the 6 Department's failure to enforce such statutory obligations, should estop the Department from asserting 7 the time limitation bar. Equitable estoppel may conceivably excuse an untimely filing of a claim under 8 RCW 51.28.050. See Wilbur, supra; Shafer v. State, 83 Wn.2d 618, 521 P.2d 736 (1974). The facts 9 presented, however, do not support the application of that doctrine. The requisites of an equitable 10 estoppel are: (1) an admission, statement, or act, inconsistent with the claim afterwards asserted; (2) 11 action by the other party on the faith of such admission, statement, or act; and (3) injury to such other 12 party arising from permitting the first party to contradict or repudiate such admission, statement, or act.
13 Shafer, supra, at 83 Wn.2d 623. Neither the employer nor the Department made any statement upon 14 which the worker or his beneficiaries had a reasonable right to rely and which led the worker or his 15 beneficiaries to delay filing a timely claim. Furthermore, even if the employer's inaction or omissions 16 could be held to have misled the worker or his beneficiaries the employer is not an agent of the 17 Department and its actions or inactions could not be imputed to the Department.
18

19 The petitioners maintain that the failure to timely file their applications for benefits should be 20 excused because of their ignorance of the law, their lack of education, and their lack of English 21 language ability. In this regard they rely on Rodriguez v. Department of Labor and Industries, 85
22 Wn.2d 949, 540 P.2d 1359 (1975) and Ames v. Department of Labor and Industries, 176 Wash. 509, 23 30 P.2d 239 (1934). In Rodriguez the court held that a Spanish speaking illiterate who was unable to 24 understand a written decision which had been communicated to him by the Department was equitably 25 excused from strict compliance with the sixty day time limit for filing a notice of appeal pursuant to 26 RCW 51.52.060. In Ames a worker, who at the time he received the Department's order rejecting his 27 claim was insane, was likewise excused from filing a notice of appeal within the sixty day appeal 28 period.
29

30 Neither Rodriguez nor Ames apply to the instant case. In both cases a claim for benefits had 31 already been filed by the worker and the Department knew or should have known that a worker who 32 was illiterate or non compos mentis would be unable to understand and appreciate the import of the 33 decision which was entered. As the Department correctly points out in its brief, the instant case does 34 not involve an untimely appeal from a Department order, but rather, an untimely application for

1 benefits. The Department did not know and had no reason to know that Isaias Chavez had been 2 injured or had died from his injury. This distinction, we think, is significant.

3
4 In essence, petitioners have requested this Board to provide equitable relief. We have 5 repeatedly indicated, however, that this Board lacks any broad equitable powers. In re Seth E.
6 Jackson, BIIA Dec., 61,088 (1982); In re Ronald E. Jamieson, BIIA Dec., 62,551 (1983). The Board 7 applies the law as established by cases such as Rodriguez and Ames, not because it holds any 8 equitable power but because it is anticipating the relief which would be granted under the principle of 9 stare decisis upon further appeal to superior court. It is without authority to expand those doctrines to 10 cases presenting dissimilar facts. Jamieson, supra, at 5. No authority has been brought to our 11 attention which would allow us to find that ignorance of the law or illiteracy constitute sufficient excuses 12 for not filing a timely claim as required by RCW 51.28.050. Under these circumstances and for the 13 aforementioned reasons we are unable to extend the principles of Rodriguez and Ames to the facts of 14 this case. We therefore feel compelled to sustain the Department order rejecting the claims of Isaias 15 Chavez and Reynalda Arceo.

16
17 The claims for benefits filed on behalf of Nora and Veronica Chavez present more compelling 18 reasons for granting relief. Nora Chavez was only two years old at the time of her father's death while 19 Veronica Chavez was born after the alleged injury, only a month before her father's death. We would 20 note that despite the well-established case law that strict compliance with the filing requirement of 21 RCW 51.28.050 is required, no Washington appellate court has addressed the issue of whether a 22 minor beneficiary can be excused from a failure to file a timely claim for benefits.

23
24 The issue of whether minority will toll the period for filing an application for benefits was 25 discussed but not decided by this Board in In re Jackie L. Davis, Jr., Dec'd., BIIA Dec., 66,123 (1985).
26 There we held that a claim for benefits filed on behalf of the children of a prior marriage was timely 27 even though filed more than one year after the deceased worker's death. However, in Davis an 28 application for benefits had been timely filed on behalf of the children of a subsequent marriage within 29 the one year time period. We held that RCW 51.28.040, permitting the Department to increase or 30 rearrange compensation where a change of circumstances had occurred, gave the Department 31 continuing jurisdiction to "rearrange" the compensation and pay benefits to the children of the prior 32 marriage. In the present case no application was ever filed within the time allowed by RCW 33 51.28.050.

1 Petitioners maintain that the Board should apply the tolling provisions of RCW 4.16.190 in order 2 to find that the claims of the Chavez children are timely. That statute provides:
3

4 If a person entitled to bring an action mentioned in this chapter, except for 5 a penalty or forfeiture, or against a sheriff or other officer, for an escape, 6 be at the time the cause of action accrued either under the age of eighteen 7 years, or incompetent or disabled to such a degree that he or she cannot 8 understand the nature of the proceedings, such incompetency or disability 9 as determined according to Chapter 11.88 RCW, or imprisoned on a 10 criminal charge, or in execution under the sentence of a court for a term 11 less than his natural life, the time of such disability shall not be a part of 12 the time limited for the commencement of action. (Emphasis added) 13

14 The weakness in petitioners' argument is that RCW 4.16.190, although indicative of this state's 15 general policy in favor of protecting persons under a mental or legal disability, applies only to the civil 16 causes of action mentioned in Chapter 4, RCW. It does not apply to special statutory proceedings or 17 rights such as those which accrue under Chapter 51, RCW. Ames, supra, 176 Wash. at 512-513.
18 Recently, we did rely, in part, on the policy expressed by RCW 4.16.190 to excuse a minor's otherwise 19 untimely claim for crime victim's compensation. In re Ben Ramahlo, BIIA Dec., 85 C025 (1987). In 20 Ramahlo, however, we noted that the origin and nature of the Crime Victim's Compensation Act would 21 permit excusing a minor from strict compliance with the timeliness requirement of RCW 7.68.060(1).
22

23 An additional reason for finding that the minor crime victim's claim was timely filed in Ramahlo 24 centered on RCW 51.04.070 which makes a minor worker sui juris for purposes of the Industrial 25 Insurance Act. While we felt it reasonable to hold a person who is old enough to work, albeit a minor, 26 to the same standard of compliance as an adult for filing claims for work injuries, we felt that had the 27 Legislature intended to make minors sui juris for purposes of filing claims for crime victims' 28 compensation, it would have specifically enacted a statute similar to RCW 51.04.070.
29

30 We would also note that RCW 51.04.070 does not expressly make minor beneficiaries sui juris 31 for purposes of the Industrial Insurance Act. Applying the same rationale as in Ramahlo, it could be 32 argued that by failing to specifically make beneficiaries sui juris for purposes of the Act, the Legislature 33 did not intend to thereby remove the legal disability which might otherwise attach to the minor child of 34 a deceased worker. We are unable, however, to predicate our decision solely on the sui juris 35 provisions of RCW 51.04.070. To find that the applications of these minor beneficiaries were timely 36 filed we must be satisfied that there is judicial precedent for tolling the period within which a minor 37 must file a claim under RCW 51.28.050.

1 Although there is no case authority construing RCW 51.28.050 as applied to claims by minor 2 beneficiaries, the courts have had the opportunity to address the issue of whether minority will toll the 3 time for filing a claim subject to an analogous non-claim statute. In Cook v. State, 83 Wn.2d 599, 521 4 P.2d 725 (1974) the court considered the issue of whether a claim by a minor against the state of 5 Washington was barred by her failure to file a claim within the 120 day time limitation of RCW
6 4.92.100, the tort non-claim statute. The minor, who was 13 years of age at the time of the injury, 7 sustained serious injuries and was hospitalized for almost six months. Her mother had only an eighth 8 grade education, was stricken by the grief of the death of another child killed in the same accident, and 9 failed to file a timely claim under the statute's provisions which allowed a relative to file a claim on 10 behalf of a minor.

11 Noting the child's minority, severe physical injuries, hospitalization, and major surgery, coupled 12 with the mother's asserted grief, worry, and educational disadvantage, the court in Cook felt it would 13 be manifestly unjust and fundamentally unfair to permit to excuse from strict compliance with the filing 14 requirement of RCW 4.92.100. In noting the inadequacy of the remedy of allowing a relative to file a 15 claim on the injured minor's behalf the court said:

16 The possibility that a friend or relative may possess the foresight to file a 17 timely claim on behalf of an incapacitated victim in our view provides too 18 slender a reed to bridge the inherent discrimination and it becomes 19 arbitrary and unreasonable when it penalizes the incapacitated if a friend 20 or relative through inadvertence or ignorance fails to act. 83 Wn.2d at 21 605.

22 The court in Cook therefore excused the late filing and adopted a rule allowing the filing of a claim 23 within a reasonable time after the child's physical disability had ceased. It is true, of course, that in 24 Cook the party alleging the time-limitation bar was the party allegedly responsible for the injuries
25 sustained by the minor child. The rule in Cook was adopted, then, in part to prevent the tortfeasor 26 from benefiting from its own wrong. In the instant case there is no contention that the Department of 27 Labor and Industries was in any way responsible for Isaias Chavez' injury or death. Furthermore, in 28 Cook the child was incapacitated by reason of her physical disabilities in addition to her minority.

29 More on point is the case of Hunter v. North Mason High School, 12 Wn. App. 304, 529 P.2d 30 898 (Div. II, 1974). In Hunter a high school student was injured in a rugby game and did not file his 31 claim against the school district until after the 120 day time limitation of RCW 4.96.020 had passed.
32 Noting that the injuries sustained by the minor were not as severe as those sustained by the minor in

1 Cook, the court nevertheless felt that basic concepts of due process and equal protection favored an 2 extension of the decision in Cook. Because minors are by statute and common law under a legal 3 disability the court believed it would be fundamentally unfair for a minor to be denied recourse to the 4 courts because of circumstances which were both legally and practically beyond his control. The court 5 considered the extent of the minor's physical injuries immaterial when, in any event, the minor was 6 legally incapable of preserving his claim. Following the rationale of Cook, the Hunter court did not 7 believe that the viability of a child's right of action should depend on the good fortune of having an 8 astute relative or friend to take the proper steps on his behalf. The court therefore held, as a matter of 9 law, that a person under the age of 18 is excused from compliance with RCW 4.96.020 and that a 10 claim is timely if filed within 120 days from the day of removal of the disability (i.e., 120 days from the 11 day minority ceased).

12
13 On appeal to the Supreme Court, the decision of the Court of Appeals in Hunter was affirmed 14 on other grounds. The Supreme Court held that non-claim statutes constituted a denial of equal 15 protection to the extent they required plaintiffs with actions against a government to present their 16 claims in a much shorter period than was required of plaintiffs generally. Hunter v. North Mason 17 School District, 85 Wn.2d 810, 539 P.2d 845 (1975). There is nothing in the Supreme Court's decision 18 in Hunter which is in any way critical of the Court of Appeal's conclusion that minority will toll the time 19 for filing a claim under the non-claim statute. On the other hand, we cannot state that the Court of 20 Appeal's decision in Hunter is controlling authority, or precedent for that proposition. It is certainly 21 insufficient precedent requiring us to conclude that minority will toll the time for filing a claim for 22 survivor's benefits under RCW 51.28.050.

23
24 Even though RCW 51.28.030 would allow a minor's application for benefits under the Act to be 25 filed by "someone in their behalf," we agree that such a provision is an inadequate protection for a 26 minor dependent beneficiary's rights. As noted by the Supreme Court in Cook and the Court of 27 Appeals in Hunter such a provision fails to protect a minor where, as here, a relative fails to act 28 through ignorance or illiteracy. We suspect that a superior or appellate court might conclude, based 29 on the circumstances of this case, that minority will toll the time for filing a claim for survivors' benefits 30 under RCW 51.28.050. Such a determination, however, is beyond the powers of this Board.

31
32 We are not unsympathetic to the difficult situation in which the Chavez children have been 33 placed. Yet RCW 51.28.050 is clear, by its terms, that claims filed more than a year beyond the day 34 the rights of the beneficiaries accrued are not valid or enforceable. What the Chavez children need

1 and seek is equitable relief from strict compliance with that statute. Because there is no clear judicial 2 precedent condoning the application of equitable relief under circumstances such as those present in 3 the instant case, this Board is without authority to excuse the untimely applications of Nora and 4 Veronica Chavez. We must therefore sustain the Department order under appeal.
5
6

7 The Board makes the following Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law.
8

9 FINDINGS OF FACT

- 10 1. On July 15, 1985 an application for industrial insurance benefits was filed 11 on behalf of Isaias Chavez alleging that he had sustained an industrial 12 injury on October 1, 1979 while in the course of his employment with 13 Desert Canyon Ranch. On September 27, 1980 Isaias Chavez died as an 14 alleged result of the injury sustained on October 1, 1979. On or about July 15 8, 1985 an application for survivor's benefits was filed on behalf of the 16 putative widow of Isaias Chavez and his minor children. By order dated 17 September 11, 1985 the Department denied the applications for benefits 18 on the grounds that no claim for injury had been filed within one year of 19 the date of injury nor within one year of the date of the worker's death. On 20 September 25, 1985 a protest and request for reconsideration was filed.
21 On September 27, 1985 the Department mailed an order, dated 22 September 26, 1985, which adhered to the provisions of the order of 23 September 11, 1985 rejecting the claim. This order was received by 24 representatives of the beneficiaries not earlier than September 28, 1985, 25 which was a Saturday. On November 27, 1985 a notice of appeal from 26 the order of the Department dated September 26, 1985 was filed on behalf 27 of the beneficiaries with the Board of Industrial Insurance Appeals. On 28 December 13, 1985 the Board issued an order granting the appeal subject 29 to proof of timeliness and assigned Docket No. 85 2867.
30
- 31 2. On some date specific in October 1979 Isaias Chavez injured his left leg 32 while in the course of his employment with Desert Canyon Ranch.
- 33 3. On September 27, 1980 Isaias Chavez died, allegedly as a result of the 34 injury sustained in October 1979.
- 35 4. Neither Isaias Chavez nor Reynalda Arceo, his putative spouse, were able 36 to read or write English. Isaias Chavez spoke only Spanish.
- 37 5. Nora and Veronica Chavez were the natural born children of Isaias 38 Chavez and were born on June 2, 1978 and August 27, 1980 respectively.
39
- 40 6. A report of accident for the injury alleged to have occurred on October 1, 41 1979 was first filed with the Department on July 15, 1985 and the claims 42 for benefits for the survivors of the deceased were first filed with the 43 Department on July 8, 1985.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. The Board of Industrial Insurance Appeals has jurisdiction over the subject matter and parties to this appeal.
2. The application for benefits filed on behalf of Isaias Chavez was not filed within one year after the day upon which the alleged injury occurred and was therefore not timely filed as required by RCW 51.28.050.
3. The applications for survivors' benefits filed by Reynalda Arceo, the putative spouse of Isaias Chavez, and on behalf of Nora and Veronica Chavez, the minor children of Isaias Chavez, were not filed within one year after the day any rights they may have had under the Act accrued and were therefore not timely filed as required by RCW 51.28.050.
5. The order of the Department of Labor and Industries dated September 26, 1985 which adhered to an earlier order rejecting the applications for benefits of Isaias Chavez, Reynalda Arceo, Nora Chavez, and Veronica Chavez on the grounds that said applications had not been filed within one year of the date of injury or within one year of the date of death of Isaias Chavez is correct and should be affirmed.

It is so ORDERED.

Dated this 17th day of July, 1987.

DISSENTING OPINION

I must concur in the affirmance of the Department order denying the untimely applications of Isaias Chavez and Reynalda Arceo only because I do not believe there is any authority which would excuse compliance with RCW 51.28.050 for reason of ignorance or illiteracy. I would not, however, impute the ignorance or neglect of the parents to Nora and Veronica Chavez. I believe minority does toll the time for filing a claim for survivors' benefits. I must therefore dissent from the denial of the children's applications.

1 The majority is clearly anticipating a court will find minority will excuse strict compliance with 2 RCW 51.28.050. Notwithstanding that confidence they feel constrained to strictly adhere to the 3 one-year time limitations for filing an application for benefits. Although the Court of Appeals decision 4 in Hunter may not technically be authority for excusing the late filing of a claim by a minor, it seems to 5 me it is at least strongly indicative of what a higher authority is likely to do in this case. Where the 6 handwriting is written on the wall, so to speak, I do not believe we should feel any restraint in 7 exercising our authority to grant appropriate relief. By denying the claims of these children we are 8 merely forcing them to go through the added delay and expense of litigation to obtain the relief which 9 they are rightfully due. That seems to me a rather inefficient use of judicial resources and is hardly 10 consistent with the spirit of the Act.
