APPEALABLE ORDERS

Protest divests Board of authority to hear appeal

PROTEST AND REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION (RCW 51.52.050)

Protest divests Board of jurisdiction over appeal

Where a Department order included a statement of protest rights as required by RCW 51.52.050, but did not promise the issuance of a further appealable order after the filing of a protest, a protest to that order deprived the Board of jurisdiction. Citing In re Santos Alonzo, BIIA Dec., 56,833 (1981). ...In re Glen Fulps, BIIA Dec., 94 7894 (1995)

1 Department's inclusion of language promising the entry of a further order is merely a recognition of
2 the impact of a timely protest.
3

4 An order which includes a statement of the protest rights, or the admonitory language,
5 carries with it the implicit recognition that a protest will result in further action by the Department.
6 Otherwise, the admonitory language invites a useless act -- the order would invite a protest but
7 include no assurance that the Department would respond in some way. We do not believe RCW
8 51.52.050, or the law as developed, intends that outcome. The Department is obliged to enter a
9 further order upon the timely filing of a protest in response to admonitory language in the order.
10 The Department's obligation does not depend upon whether or not the protested order includes 11 explicit language advising the parties that a further order will be entered.
12

13 The Department, by omitting the clause assuring the entry of a further appealable order,
14 cannot change the impact of a timely protest and/or request for reconsideration. This Board does
15 not have jurisdiction over an appealed order where a party timely protested an order which includes 16 the protest rights or admonitory language required by RCW 51.52.050. For that reason, we must 17 deny this appeal.

19 The Department is obliged under RCW 5152.050 to respond to Mr. Fulps' timely protest of 20 the August 11, 1994 order. The Department cannot transmit the appeal to this Board for 21 consideration as in those instances where the order only includes a notification of appeal rights.
22 CF. In re Tony Mandrell, BIIA Dec., 92 2819 (1993); In re Donzella Gammon, BIIA Dec., 70,041
23 (1985).
24

25 As a result, we conclude that the Department is still obliged to issue that further
26 determination even if the protest rights notification does not include a promise to issue a further
27 appealable order. The order dated August 11, 1994 is not a final order of the Department of Labor
28 and Industries. It is therefore ORDERED that this appeal be denied. Denial of this appeal is 29 without prejudice to the right of any party to appeal any further order of the Department.
