OCCUPATIONAL DISEASE (RCW 51.08.140)

Successive insurers

The State Fund is an insurer for purposes of determining the responsible insurer for an occupational disease claim. The last injurious exposure rule is used to determine the responsible insurer and does not allow apportionment between successive insurers. This rule does not prevent the Department from apportioning claim costs between various state fund employers. ...In re Cindy Meisner, BIA Dec., 95 6101 (1997) [Editor's Note: The Board's decision was appealed to superior court under King County Cause No. 97-2-16495-8 SEA.]

STATE OF WASHINGTON

1 IN RE: CINDY A. MEISNER ) DOCKET NO. 95 6101

5 APPEARANCES:

7 Claimant, Cindy A. Meisner, by 8 George M. Riecan & Associates, Inc., P.S., per
9 Robert R. Hall

10
11 Employer, Spears Manufacturing Co, by 12 Thomas G. Hall & Associates, per
13 Janet Smith

14
15 Department of Labor and Industries, by 16 The Office of the Attorney General, per 17 Peter Helmberger, Assistant
18

19 The employer, Spears Manufacturing Co, filed an appeal with the Board of Industrial 20 Insurance Appeals on November 27, 1995, from an order of the Department of Labor and 21 Industries dated September 28, 1995. The order affirmed an order dated March 10, 1995, allowing 22 the claim for occupational disease and naming Spears Manufacturing as the employer.

26

27 AFFIRMED.

28
29 DECISION

30
31 Pursuant to RCW 51.52.104 and RCW 51.52.106, this matter is before the Board for review
32 and decision on a timely Petition for Review filed by the employer to a Proposed Decision and 33 Order issued on October 25, 1996, in which the order of the Department dated September 28,
34 1995, was affirmed.
35
36
37
38

39 This matter was presented to the Board by way of stipulated facts. Review has been 40 granted to discuss the application of WAC 296-17-870(6), that apportions costs of occupational 41 disease claims, and the last injurious exposure rule codified in WAC 296-14-350(1). The 42 Department of Labor and Industries maintains that these rules apply to different determinations and 43 are not in conflict. The employer contends that the last injurious exposure rule, upheld by the
45
46
47

1 Washington State Supreme Court in Fankhauser v. Department of Labor & Indus., 121 Wn.2d 304
3 (1993), and Weyerhaeuser Company v. Tri, 117 Wn.2d 128 (1991), ostensibly overrules WAC 296-
5 17-870(6). We disagree with the employer and conclude that the provisions can, and should be
7 applied in the manner proposed by the Department of Labor and Industries.
8

9 The stipulated facts indicate that Ms. Meisner has worked for three different employers
10
11 since 1986. In each job, she worked 40 hours per week and was required to repetitively use her 12
13 right upper extremity doing 10-key data entry and computer work. She worked for Evergreen
14
15 Temporary Services from February 1986 and February 1987, Spears Manufacturing from February
16
17 1987 through October 7, 1994, and Mr. Ed's Bingo Casino from October 10, 1994 through 18
19 September 1995.
20

21 While employed at Spears, Ms. Meisner began experiencing occasional right hand, right
22
23 elbow and/or right arm pain with numbing in the top of the hand leading into the elbow. She 24
25 continued to have pain in her right hand, right elbow and/or right arm with activity after becoming 26
27 employed at Mr. Ed's Bingo Casino. She claims that she did not have right hand, elbow, and/or 28
29 arm pain while employed at Evergreen Temporary Services, although a work history form she 30
31 completed for the Department lists work activity with all three employers as causing her pain
32
33 complaints. Ms. Meisner first obtained a diagnosis and treatment for her right hand/elbow and/or 34
35 arm condition on October 14, 1994, when she saw Dr. Leonard Allott. Another physician, Dr. H.
36
37 Richard Johnson, is of the opinion that Ms. Meisner's right hand, elbow, and/or arm condition was 38
39 proximately caused by repetitive use of the right upper extremity due to work activities of 10-key 40
41 data entry and computer work. Ms. Meisner filed an application for benefits with the Department on 42
43 October 18, 1994, at which time she was working for Mr. Ed's Bingo Casino. She, nevertheless,
44
45 identified Spears as her employer on her application for benefits. The Department order dated 46
47

1 March 10, 1995 allowing the claim listed Spears Manufacturing as the employer. Ms. Meisner
3 received time loss compensation beginning September 12, 1995.

5 Spears Manufacturing contends that they are not the responsible employer for Ms. Meisner's
7 claim, and that in accordance with WAC 296-14-350(1) and the fact that Ms. Meisner's last
8
9 exposure to the harmful activity was during her employment with Mr. Ed's Bingo Casino, that Mr.
10
11 Ed's Bingo Casino should be the employer responsible for the costs of the claim. The Department
12
13 maintains that the allowance order lists Spears Manufacturing because she was working for Spears
14
15 when she first developed symptoms and had only limited exposure to the hazard at Mr. Ed's Bingo
16
17 Casino at the time the condition was first diagnosed. The Department also maintains (more
18
19 importantly) that since the employers potentially involved with this occupational disease claim all 20
21 insure their industrial insurance obligations through the state fund, as defined by RCW 51.08.175,
22
23 the claim costs will be prorated pursuant to WAC 296-17-870(6). Before prorating costs, pursuant 24
25 to this rule, the Department must first determine the extent to which each of Ms. Meisner's
26
27 employments contributed to her condition.
28

29 Spears Manufacturing argues that the last injurious exposure rule upheld by the Washington 30
31 State Supreme Court in both Tri and Fankhauser, supra and codified by WAC 296-14-350(1)
32
33 supersedes the apportionment of occupational disease cases set out in WAC 296-17-870(6). They 34
35 also argue that the Department, as trustee of the medical aid and accident funds, is not an 36
37 "insurer", citing as authority Stamp v. Department of Labor & Indus., 122 Wn.2d 536 (1993). We 38
39 disagree with both arguments.
40

41 In adopting the last injurious exposure rule in Tri the Supreme Court explicitly sought to 42
43 remedy the assignment of liability between successive insurers. The court recognized the burden
44
45 that would be placed on injured workers to prove a precise percentage of liability in order to receive 46
47 compensation from more than one insurer and rejected apportionment between insurers as

1 inconsistent with the Industrial Insurance Act's goal of sure and certain relief. In Fankhauser, the
3 Supreme Court emphasized that the last injurious exposure rule applies between insurers
5 operating under the provisions of the Industrial Insurance Act. Fankhauser, at 311 and 312.<sup>1</sup>

7 We turn now to Spears Manufacturing's alternate theory, that the Department is not an 8
9 "insurer." In Stamp, the Court interpreted the Oregon Insurance Guaranty Association's (OIGA)
10
11 enabling statute that prohibited OIGA funds from being recovered by any "insurer." The Court held 12
13 that neither the self-insured employer nor the Department were "insurers" for the purpose of the 14
15 insurance guaranty statute. This interpretation, however, was in the context of the insurance
16
17 guaranty statute, not the Industrial Insurance Act or the Department's regulations promulgated
18
19 pursuant to the Act. The Court found that the goal of both Washington and Oregon's insurance
20
21 guaranty statute is to ensure that no insurer be able to recover from its insurance guaranty fund.
22
23 Both self-insured employers and the Department were held not to be "insurers" for the purposes of 24
25 either the Oregon guaranty act, or its Washington counterpart. We conclude that Stamp is limited
26
27 to the context of the guaranty act.
28

29 WAC 296-14-350(1), in codifying the court's adoption of the last injurious exposure rule, 30
31 consistently refers to "liable insurer," rather than using the term "liable employer." WAC 296-14-
32
33 350(1) states, in part, the "liable insurer in occupational disease cases is the insurer on risk at the 34
35 time of the last injurious exposure to the injurious substance or hazard of disease during 36
37 employment within coverage of Title 51 RCW that gave rise to the claim for compensation." The 38
39 last injurious exposure rule must be applied when successive insurers under our state's Industrial 40
41 Insurance Act are involved. In the State of Washington, only the state fund and self-insured
42
43

44
45 <sup>1</sup> In Fankhauser the Supreme Court found that a self-employed worker was not within the coverage of the Act. The 46 court rejected the idea that self-employment equated with self-insurance. Therefore, the last injurious exposure rule 47 could not apply because Fankhauser was not an insurer under the Act. The last injurious exposure rule is not a rule of broad application. We have noted in several earlier decisions that the rule does not operate to deny coverage as between insurance "systems," i.e., between Washington's Industrial Insurance Act and another state or federal system

1 employers are considered insurers for the purpose of industrial insurance. The concept of last
2 injurious exposure identifies the liable insurer, between the state fund and a self-insured employer,
3 or between two self-insured employers. The concept of last injurious exposure is not intended to
4 be applied to the Department's process of determining responsibility within the insurance functions
5 of the state fund.

10 The Industrial Insurance Act clearly establishes the Department's responsibilities to operate
11 the industrial insurance state fund in accordance with recognized principles of insurance, including
12 the underwriting of insurance and assessment of monetary obligations to insured employers. WAC
13 296-17-870 sets forth the methods for evaluating actual losses and determining how employers
14 insured with the state fund shall be assessed for losses. Section 6 reads as follows:
15
16
17
18
19

20
21 Occupational disease claims. When a claim results from an 22 employee's exposure to an occupational disease hazard, the 'date of 23 injury,' for the purposes of experience rating, shall be the date on which 24 the disability was diagnosed, giving rise to the filing of a claim for 25 benefits. The cost of any occupational disease claim, paid from the 26 accident fund and the medical aid fund and arising from exposure 27 to the disease hazard under two or more employers, shall be 28 prorated to each period of employment involving exposure to the 29 hazard. Each insured employer who had employed the claimant during 30 the experience period, and for at least ten percent of the claimant's
31 exposure to the hazard, shall be charged for his share of the claim
32 based upon the prorated costs.
33

34 (Emphasis added.)
35

36 Under this rule, the Department's ability to prorate the cost of a claim to more than one
37 employer is limited to four conditions. First, the claim must be filed for an occupational disease.
38 Second, the claim costs must have been paid from the accident fund and medical aid fund. Third,
39 the condition for which the claim is filed must result from exposure to a hazard while working for 40 more than one employer. Fourth, the proration applies to employers insured with the state fund, of industrial insurance. In re John Robinson, BIIA Dec., 91 0741 (1992); See, also, In re Gary Peck, Dckt. No. 91 6243 (January 14, 1993).

1 who employed the worker during the experience period, in which at least ten percent of the workers
2 exposure to the hazard occurred. The identification in the WAC of claims paid from the accident
3 fund and the medical aid fund clearly references claims that have been paid by the Department
5 for state fund insured employers. Self-insured claims are paid by the self-insured employer and
7 are not paid from the accident fund and medical aid fund. We find the Department's authority to
9 prorate claims costs under this rule to be consistent with the state fund's role as an insurer.
10

12
13       Employers who obtain industrial insurance coverage through the state fund share the risk
14
15 and cost of their industrial insurance claims with other employers. The last injurious exposure rule
16
17 adopted by the Supreme Court in Tri was intended to apply to the insuring entity responsible for 18
19 payment of the claim, rather than individual employers being insured by that entity. In addition, the 20
21 Department's allocation of costs among employers insured by the state fund by utilizing the last 22
23 injurious exposure rule would, in effect, compromise the Department's ability to reduce uncertainty
24
25 and spread the financial burden of losses for employers.
26

27       In conclusion, we cite with approval the industrial appeals judge's statement: "The last 28
29 injurious exposure rule was only intended to apply when there are different insurers involved. Of 30
31 course, the Department must apportion costs under this claim as indicated by its rule, and perhaps 32
33 Spears would be well advised to work with the Department to ensure it is only assessed its proper
34
35 share." Proposed Decision and Order, at 3. (Emphasis in original.) The Department order is 36
37 affirmed.

3 FINDINGS OF FACT

- 5 1. On October 18, 1994, Cindy A. Meisner, the claimant, filed an 6 application for industrial insurance benefits alleging an industrial
7 injury/occupational disease on or about June 1, 1994, during the course
8 of her employment with Spears Manufacturing Company. On 9 March 10, 1995, the Department issued an order allowing the claim for 10 an occupational disease and listing Spears Manufacturing as the 11 interested employer. On May 5, 1995, Spears Manufacturing protested
12 the March 10, 1995 order. On September 28, 1995, the Department
13 issued an order affirming the March 10, 1995 order. On 14 November 27, 1995, Spears Manufacturing appealed the 15 September 28, 1995 order, and on January 3, 1996, the Board of 16 Industrial Insurance Appeals granted the appeal and assigned it
17 Docket 95 6101.
18
19 2. Cindy Meisner was employed by Evergreen Temp from February 1986
20 through February 1987, working 40 hours a week, doing 10-key data
21 entry and computer work. She worked for Spears Manufacturing from 22 February, 1987 until October 7, 1994, working forty hours a week, doing
23 10-key data entry and computer work. She began employment for 24 Mr. Ed's Bingo Casino on October 10, 1994 through September 1995,
25 working 40 hours a week doing 10-key data entry and computer work.
26
27 3. Cindy Meisner, while employed at Spears Manufacturing, began having 28 occasional right hand, elbow and/or arm pain, with numbing over the top
29 of the hand leading into the elbow. She continued to experience right
30 hand, elbow and/or arm pain with activity while employed at Mr. Ed's
31 Bingo Casino. Both of these employers insure their industrial insurance
32 obligations through the state fund as defined by RCW 51.08.175.
33
34 4. Ms. Meisner first obtained a diagnosis and/or treatment for the right
35 hand/elbow and/or arm condition on October 14, 1994, when she saw
36 Dr. Leonard Allott. Cindy Meisner's right hand, elbow and/or arm
37 condition was proximately caused by the repetitive use of the right
38 upper extremity in accomplishing work activities of 10-key data entry
39 and computer work. She filed an application for industrial insurance
40 benefits on October 18, 1994, and was first paid time loss
41 compensation for the period beginning September 12, 1995.

42 CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

- 43 1. The Board of Industrial Insurance Appeals has jurisdiction over the 44 parties and the subject matter of this appeal.
45
46 2. Ms. Meisner developed an occupational disease that arose naturally 47 and proximately from work activities associated with 10-key data entry and computer work. At the time she filed her claim for benefits, and had

1 the occupational disease diagnosed, she was working for a state fund
2 employer, Mr. Ed's Bingo Casino. Pursuant to WAC 296-14-350 (1),
3 the insurer on risk for Ms. Meisner's occupational disease claim is the
4 Department of Labor and Industries "state fund."

- 6 3. Pursuant to WAC 296-17-870 (6), the date of injury in claim N-933779,
7 is October 18, 1994, at which time Ms. Meisner worked for Mr. Ed's
8 Bingo Casino. In prorating the costs of this occupational disease claim
9 pursuant to WAC 296-17-870 (6), the Department shall prorate to each
10 period of employment involving exposure to the hazard for the purposes
11 of determining each state fund employer's experience rating. The last 12 injurious exposure rule, WAC 296-14-350(1) does not preclude the 13 Department from listing Spears Manufacturing as the employer in this
14 claim, since the last insurer was the Department.
15
- 16 4. The order of the Department of Labor and Industries dated 17 September 28, 1995, that affirmed a prior order allowing Ms. Meisner's 18 claim for an occupational disease and listing Spears Manufacturing as 19 the employer, is correct and is affirmed.
20

21 It is so ORDERED.
